

There are people who do not understand Autism.

They will tell you that it's your parenting, that your child needs to learn to work around you, or that Autism doesn't exist.

You will learn to advocate for your child, and you will find this strength about yourself that you didn't even know you had. You will be tired, you will be challenged, but you will also develop a deeper love and respect for your child.

Darcel White